OLD HUNDRED

"Old Hundred" is a post-revolutionary mansion on the Main Street of Ridgefield, Connecticut which has been completely renovated by Mr. and Mrs. Larry Aldrich to provide a museum for the exhibition of contemporary art. Built in 1780 by King and Dale, two lieutenants in the Revolutionary War, "Old Hundred" derived its name from its use until 1861 as a grocery and hardware store, where, in the evenings, it was a center for discussions of the affairs of the state and the nation. Grace King Impaglia, a descendant of one of the founders of the store, took over the building as her residence. It has been used since 1929 as the First Church of Christ Scientist. Extensive alterations have been made to convert "Old Hundred" into a museum, preserving most exterior features of the old landmark.

A diversified calendar of exhibitions of contemporary art and programs of interest to the general public are planned. A reference library and reading room are available for artists and students. The library will be expanded to meet the demands of specialized research and the general needs of the community. The reference material begins with the impressionist movement and will keep pace with the latest contemporary developments in art.

Dimensions are given in inches; height precedes width.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE 1964-65 ART SEASON

THIS "HIGHLIGHTS" EXHIBITION is my personal survey of the best of the 1964-65 art season. The selection represents my choice of the most stimulating, exciting, and impressed works from the many New York gallery shows I have viewed from last September to this past May.

Admittedly, I did not see every show, and if examples had been available, I would have included the sculpture of Pol Bury, the paintings of Larry Poons, and the boxes of Joseph Cornell.

I made the commitment to show an artist in this exhibition at the time of viewing each show at the gallery.

In reviewing my choices at the end of the season, it was most interesting to me to note that four of the artists I had selected are internationally known: Hofmann, Dubuffet, Nevelson and Bitsner. Seven are selected from their first one-man exhibitions in a New York gallery: Kalinowski, Bridget Riley, Tzadkap, Casselle, Maccio, Soto, and Tony De Lapp. Five had been successfully shown once or more in previous years: Baurmeister, Boleney, Jensen, Porter, and Trova.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the lenders who so kindly made this exhibition possible.

It is my plan to have a "Highlights" exhibition every summer at "Old Hundred."

JEAN DUBUFFET
courtesy, Robert Eikoon Gallery, New York

Jean Dubuffet was born in 1901 in Le Havre, France and has spent most of his life in his native country. One of the most versatile and important international artists of today, he is renowned for his oils, gouaches, collages, lithographs, and drawings. A writer, a musician, a soldier, a world traveler, he has also been an industrial designer and a wine merchant. Since 1942 he has devoted himself to his career in the arts, and he had his first one-man show in Paris in 1947. An artist of enormous productivity, between 1944 and 1962 he completed over 5000 works, including 1600 oils, 77 sculptures, and 480 lithographs. He is represented in most public and private contemporary collections throughout the world, had many one-man shows, and participated in major group shows. His retrospective exhibition at The Museum of Modern Art, New York, in 1962 travelled to The Chicago Art Institute and The Los Angeles County Museum of Art.
HANS HOFMANN

Hans Hofmann, born in Germany in 1880, has been a resident for many years of New York and Provincetown. Regarded as the Dean of American Abstract Expressionism, he has for four decades as an artist and teacher greatly influenced the growth of American art. A retrospective exhibition of his paintings, originating in 1957 at the Whitney Museum of American Art, traveled in 1957 to 7 cities. In 1963, The Museum of Modern Art's retrospective show of his works toured North and South America and Europe. Mr. Hofmann has received many awards and honorary degrees. His work is included in most important public and private collections.
